
A Booty report

Posted by Luft Krigare - 2008/05/06 14:47

From the Sporting News NFC Report:
Minnesota Vikings

QB John David Booty reported to rookie minicamp with an infected finger but was able to participate in drills. The team doesn't have any immediate plans for Booty, aside from having him be the No. 3 quarterback behind Tarvaris Jackson and Gus Frerotte, but coaches are intrigued by his proficiency in the short passing game and consider him an ideal developmental quarterback in the West Coast offense. Booty already knows how to make all the throws required of him because of his experience in college. In a year or two, he could be the team's No. 2 quarterback and offer a starting alternative if Jackson should falter.

This is another report indicating that the coaches were please with him last weekend. I don't remember previously reading about the finger though...

I hope that he does develop into a good #2 guy sitting right behind Super Bowl champion Tarvaris Jackson. (I can hope, and I do think he has the tools.)

=====

Re:A Booty report

Posted by bleedpurple - 2008/05/06 15:55

Hey Luft,

I know T-Jack can be a great QB, just look at history, 85 Bears had mediocre QB but great Payton RB and Def, 91-92 Redskins had Rypien (great year in 91' but nothing after) awesome Def and triple threat in backfield , Dilfer with Ravens, best Defense ever, so I think the Vikes with similar formula of a good to decent QB (he is still developing) and a great RB backfield, and now a great defense, has a chance :cheer:

=====